

There is nothing truly liberatory, DIY, or punk about any of them.

monopolizing our attention to extract profit built on the same twisted dream of Bluesky - these corporate platforms are all Discord, Substack, Google's YouTube, and even Instagram/WhatsApp, TikTok, Twitter, Telegram, corporate platform to another. Meta/Facebook/billions-investor-owned centralized We don't want to see another jump from one algorithms that feed us mindless content war - all while trapping us with addictive surveillance, and fund the cult of capitalist These platforms enrich billionaires, expand media platforms.

We invest too much of our culture in centralized, for-profit, corporate social

DIY SOCIAL MEDIA

ALLPUNKSPLEASELEAVEMETA.com

A network of interconnected social media platforms that are:

- inherently anti-corporate (built by autonomous individuals, collectives, non-profits, open-source weirdos and it can't be owned by any person or company)
- DIY (anyone can host a server or build a part of the network)
- Won't keep leaving us (we can invest in something we build for ourselves)
- A healthier scroll (no profit motive = no addictive doomscroll)
- Not a walled garden (you don't need to sign up and sell out to stay connected)

We propose a radical alternative that's actually aligned with punk values:
